Torres Consulting expands labor-regulations initiative to Nevada

May 3, 2010 – LAS VEGAS Torres Consulting and Law Group (TCLG) has broadened its collaboration with the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) to ensure that labor leaders have all the facts about regulations that ensure prevailing wages for their workers. In the age of Federal economic stimulus-funded construction projects, contractors now are required to pay prevailing wages to workers per the Federal Davis Bacon Act.

Last week, leadership from the United Association International and Five States Pipe Trades met with DOL investigators and administrators to identify Davis Bacon compliance-related priorities at the DOL, as well as to discuss monitoring requirements, common violations and their consequences.

Mark Butler, UA International Representative, welcomes participants to the Five States Pipe Trades' first-ever Davis Bacon Workshop.

Managing Partner Israel Torres discusses TCLG's Compliance Initiative for the southwestern U.S.

“As TCLG coordinates with the Department of Labor to serve the workforce and construction industries of the southwest United States, we observe an ongoing need to educate and inform organized labor and contractors as to the regulations and rights that govern their activities,” says Israel G. Torres, TCLG managing partner. “In doing this, we hope to cultivate a more level playing field for workers on these Federal government projects.”
